

Hello, how are you doing? It's April, for me, it's been one month since I was relocated to the other host family. I was concerned about how I would do with my new host family, but now I think I'm doing very good. It was fun being around little kids but I'm enjoying here hanging out with kids around my age. Through all the series of events I got to know a lot about myself and tons of stuff. One of my host sisters is from my class and I already knew her, so that helped me a lot to get used to it quickly. I had seen her sister, mom and dad too. I'm trying to make everything work better than how it was last time, I try to keep everything that I learned from my ex-host family in my mind. The thing that I'm most grateful is that I'm still keeping in touch with my ex-host family. I went to my ex-host sis' birthday party after I moved.

Soccer

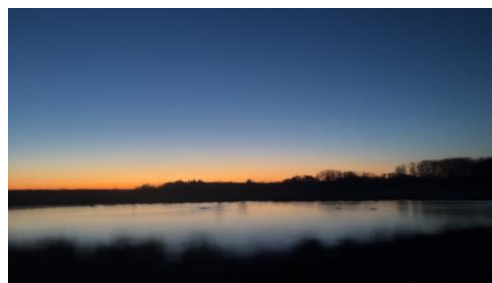

One day I was hanging out with my host sister and her friends and one of them suddenly asked me to play soccer. I'd been interested in it, but because I thought I was not going to find a ride, I said no. And then she said she can give me a ride, that's why I came to be able to play it. I was just so excited since it was like seven years ago that I played soccer last time and I had not been working out at all, my first week of practice was incredibly painful. I don't even belong to any sport team back in Japan so I was not used to run even for ten minutes. Also, it was pretty much only me playing soccer as a first year. I had to catch up so I was kinda mentally pressured. I tried hard now, I'm not a starter but I do play several minutes of the game, I even scored at a game. So far we have been winning, I'm trying to push myself to work hard so that my team can get better, and win the championship.

Easter

Easter is one of the important Christian events. My host family took me to the family gathering. We did egg hunting. For kids there was candy, and for adults there was money in the egg. Hunting was fun, but it was also fun to hide the eggs for adults. We did some other Easter games which was on TikTok, those were fun too. On actual Easter Day, my host mom gave us an Easter basket one for each. I got a towel, bunch of candies and drinks, and stuff like that.

The Easter basket.

Here are some random pictures of the sky bc I thought they were pretty.
