

Hello. I will write this report in English on a whim. I can see it is snowing or hailing outside at night sometimes even though some spring flowers are already bloomed. Spring is coming soon. My neighbor told me those flowers are called "crocus" when I was looking at the flowers. I heard cherry blossoms are in full bloom in Tokyo. I love and miss Japanese cherry blossoms so much. So, I have made a clay that has cherry blossom design in my art class.

1. What I did in my classes

Let me write about what happened and what I did in February. I do not really remember what happened in February because it was an ordinary month and it passed so fast. Last month, my school wore me out, but it made me less tired this month. I think the reason I felt less tired is I am getting used to the new semester. However, I still struggle a lot with assignment, especially with psychology and English. My score of the last psychology test was just 50%, although I studied hard for that test five days before the test. It disappointed me very much, and I thought I need to understand more English words that are used a lot on the textbook.

On the other hand, in my English class, our assignments were discussing social problems to reach solutions, writing some poetries, and memorizing some terms about figurative language. I think it's hard to make a poetry even in Japanese, but it's so fun for me to think about rhymes, syllables, and so on. I sometimes get some help from ChatGPT to make rhymes. (I don't cheat at all, just get some advice.) In this class, my English teacher told me he doesn't get me because my English is still improving. That was my first time to be told that my English is not good in such a direct manner. Anyway, it is what it is. My confidence of English was completely crushed by the teacher, but I resolved that I'll study English so that I can get perfect mark on English test!! Those are what happened at my classes in February.

2. Music activities

There was a music festival in the end of February. We performed some pieces of music and listened to other schools' music. It was pretty good. The judge gave some instructions and mentioned us as a highlight. So, we are going to play music at a bigger music concert. I'm so looking forward to it. Additionally, I thought I would really miss Hakuo brass band. Although I enjoy my school band, to be honest, it's not as good as Hakuo brass band, and it is for beginner students. Thus, I'm thinking of joining a new concert band outside school that is at a higher level. I don't know much about the new band yet, but I believe I have enough skill to join that band. I will try something new next month.

Also, I made new friends through these music activities. These days, I spend most of my time every day at music room, playing instruments with friends, joining pop-music band, and talking with friends. It makes me so excited, and I thought music is common all over the world and a great tool to connect other people beyond the barrier of languages. I'm so glad that I love music.

Actually, I miss Japan so much and want to go back Japan, but I still have 4 months, or should I feel just 4 months? Whichever, I will try to enjoy life in Canada and have good experiences. Half a year has gone by so fast. I hope I could get my English improved next month and experience more things to write next month's report. If I had enough time, I would write the report in English next month, too! See you next time!
