

Hello, it's been five months since I came to Canada and finally, the year ended. I am so curious because I feel it is like three months-ish. It was so fast.

On January 9th, I went to the mountain to snowboard. It was hard to figure out how to snowboard because it was the first time. I guess I fell over 20 times. But it was so fun. Well, I broke and hurt my whole body and got cold later though.

I am going to snowboard again this month, I hope I can do well this time.

January 17th was my birthday. My host family held a birthday party for me. I requested chicken curry for dinner and had an ice cream cake. I was so happy and thankful for them. According to them, as a Canadian, the birthday of 16 years old is more important than other old because 16 years old people can get a driver license. (However, I am not allowed to drive a car from my organization.)

Half of my life in Canada is past, and the end is coming, too. I will try more things such as events, studying, sports so as not to regret anything.
