

Hello everyone!! I'm writing this report 23 of the April, which is the day marks exactly four months since I came here. Every month I write this report, I'm always surprised how fast time flies. I'll be sharing what I did for this one month and how I spend weekdays.

I went to Henley Beach with my friends by bike. Henley Beach is my favourite place in Adelaide. It's popular with local people, but it's not that busy. You can see some people running or riding bikes along the beach trail. There are only a few restaurants compared to other beaches. It's located in the western part of Adelaide, and I lived in eastern edge of Adelaide, which means it was completely on the other side of town. The drivers here are crazy it's really dangerous to ride bikes on normal roads, that's why my host father recommended me we use the river trail to get to the beach. So, it took such a long time to get there - about 2 and half hour. When I finally made it there, I was so exhausted that lunch at the beach with my friends. The view from where we were sitting was amazing and someone told us there was dolphins nearby, I didn't see clearly but I saw the fine on the surface of the sea. That was such a nice memory for me.

I watched "The devil wears Prada 2" released last month. I had never seen the series, but my friends invited me. When I told it to my host mother, she strongly recommended me to watch first one before watching new one, but for some reasons I didn't, and I thought I would enjoy the movie even if I didn't know first one. However, it was different that I expected. I couldn't understand what was going on because of my poor English. It was unlike action or horror movies, this movie focused on dialogue instead of dramatic or outlandish events and main theme was human relationships. This made me much more confused and couldn't really enjoyed it. So, I looked up the characters, what happened, the theme of the movie. For some reasons I ended up watching the movie again with other friends. At that time, I had already known most of the stories and tried to concentrate listening what's they were talking about. Surprisingly I could understand the story and really enjoyed watching the movie. Throughout the experience I felt like my English was gradually improving.
