

Hello everyone. 4 months have passed since I left from Japan. I live in South Australia, and the weather is cold. It rains for a shorter period however the raindrops are quite strong. In Japan, it is already summer, so I feel very strange here because of the cold weather. I usually spend recent time wearing sweater or like a jacket. The night and morning in here are quiet cold. it reaches 5 degrees in these times. But around 10am – 2pm, it is going to be approximately 20 degrees.

The school became little bit boring for me nowadays. It is because that I have gotten used to living here. also, I have gotten used to talking in English as well. But still sometimes I get confused to do that. In here, there is no test like Japanese one. There is a lot of homework called assignment instead of the test. Thus, the students just do assignment in some lessons. These lessons are too easy for me. I usually finished assignments early and after that, I study by myself.

Recently I noticed that I only read the number as Japanese while I read English sentences in my brain. For instance, the number 2026 is simply “Nisennijuroku” for me. I cannot decide and pronounce these numbers instantly. I have many Viet friends. Almost of them, the last name is “Nguyen”. I asked to some Viet friends, they said that 40 % of Viet have this name. I was so surprised when I heard this. I thought there is a lot of strange culture in the world. Besides, I noticed my Indian friends have a characteristic English pronunciation. They cannot pronounce T and R. I think this is same as us. For people whose first language is Japanese, they cannot distinguish between R and L. I try to say “literally” perfectly but I still cannot do that.

I like to go to night beach and see that. so, me and my friends usually go to beach after we hung out. we went to a lot of beaches. Recent time, we saw Tennyson beach. It was cold day and there are dark crowds. Suddenly the rain started and we got very wet. I want to take care of my physical condition.

Thank you for reading this, I hope that the last half year in here become good as well!
